

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus for indicating device and system readiness to a user. An indicator is located on one or more devices of a data-handling system. The state of the indicator communicates the status of the device or system. The indicator can be standardized across two or more devices of the data-handling system. The indicator can include a single element or of multiple elements.